Bishop leads centenary celebration

AN historic church which has played a central role in the life of Wemyss Bay for 100 years has held celebrations to mark its centenary.

St Joseph's and St Patrick's was packed for the commemoration led by Bishop John Mone.

Television pictures from the service were relayed to the church hall which was used as an "overflow" for the centenary event, which had been given a papal blessing.

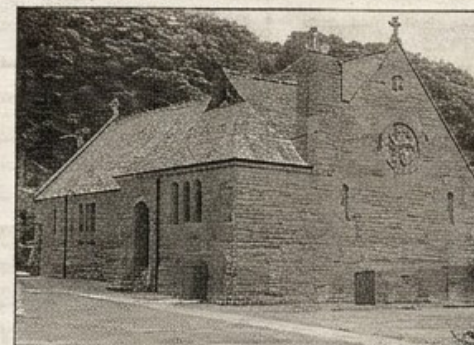

Bishop Mone, Bishop Stephen McGill and a large number of visiting priests celebrated Mass.

Inverclyde Provost David Roach, Inal councillor Bob Campbell, the Rev Bill Armstrong, minister of Skelmorite and Wemyss Bay Parish Church, and a number of school head teachers were among the guests.

During the service Bishop Mone unveiled a centenary plaque in the church and afterwards Canon Joseph Quian, parish Priest, and Mr Armstrong planted trees to signify the ecumenical spirit in which the centenary celebrations had been conducted.

Canon Quian told the Telegraph: "A marquee was set up in the church grounds and after the service everyone enjoyed some food and the chance to meet friends old and new. The following night we had a dance in the Gourock Jarvis Hotel.

Centenary

23rd June 1901 - 2001

THE church centenary book.

By DAVID
CARNDUFF

Every aspect of the centenary celebrations was a great success."

Meanwhile, a centenary book has been published giving a history of worship in the area.

It notes that Inverkip was a parish according to Papal Registers of the Pontificate of Honorius III (1216 to 1227).

In 1969, a wooden but was used as a chapel for worship in Main Street, Inverkip, and this was moved to Wemyss Bay in 1887. The present church was built for a cost of £1,200 to accommodate 200 parishioners and was formally dedicated on 23 June, 1901.
